There are quite a few different types of cranks for the little Holden. There are two stroke lengths; the 202 engine uses a 3.25" stroke while everything else from the 138 red up to the 186 is 3" stroke. There are also two different materials used; the 3" cranks made before the introduction of the HK in mid '67 are steel, plus the 186 X2, the ...

The Holden straight-six motor is a series of straight-six engine that were produced by General Motors-Holden's in Australia between 1948 and 1986. Initially the Grey motor so dubbed because of the colour of the cylinder block, later motors came in the form of a Red, Blue, Black and the four-cylinder Starfire engine.

Holden straight-six motor - Wikipedia

The Blue engine was, however, very much the same Red motor that had been introduced back in 1963, although with many modifications and improvements along the way. In fact, the Red engine was modified for just about every new model Holden, particularly in capacity, and the biggest changes of all were reserved for its last outing in the VK Commodore.
